This not meant to rub it in. Well maybe a little. In order to be categorized as "Snowbirds", Kathy and I decided to go back down to the Gulf of Mexico again this year to spend some time away from the snow and cold. Just after we arrived to 70 degree temps we heard about the snow storm. I couldn't help but smile when I accessed our web cameras at home and saw a foot of snow everywhere. I thought to myself this is exactly why we got out of dodge. Of course this was just after a power failure that made be wonder if the plumbing pipes in the house would freeze thus producing a flood once power was restored. As luck had it, the power outage was only three hours in duration. The just of this explanation is to explain how lucky I feel us Michiganders are as a result of living in Michigan. Yes we have our snow and rain storms as well as tornados. And likewise the rest of the country has their share of rain and snow storms and tornados, but let me tell you how lucky we are. We visited New Orleans the second week of our time there. We left just in time as the weather gods decided to open up on Louisiana all because of El Nino. By the way, we were staying in Biloxi/Gulfport, Mississippi, just an hour east on I-10. As a result of the flooding there was constant television coverage. All of this was occurring just a little over an hour away. Where we were, we only received a couple of inches of rain. There were many areas that had 16-20" of rain in a 24 hour period. It continued to rain relentlessly for three days. The various TV stations televised countless rescues of people stranded on roofs or in their vehicles. Even a school bus full of children had to be rescued. Water was up to the roof of hundreds of houses. Many pictures of cars (Thankfully I never saw a corvette) and trucks completely submerged in water were shown. Rivers were way above flood stage. Higher than they've seen in a 130 years. From my perspective it might as well as have been a hurricane. It just seemed surreal. Just before we left, the news was reporting that Texas was getting huge amounts of rain. A repeat of what Louisiana is going thru. The weather patterns are definitely changing. Be glad we live in Michigan where this type of event seldom occurs.

I also would like to give a brief update on the National Corvette Museum. We always stop in Bowling Green at the museum on our way down and in this case we had to stop on the way back also. I was going to tour the plant when we went down but it turned out that week was blacked out for tours. But the Museum was open and of course I had to check out the repairs after the massive sink hole enveloped those 8 cars two years ago. They have the entire Skydome section of the museum fully open now. All 8 of the cars are on display. I was really excited about the prospect of peering down into the sink hole after reading somewhere that they had a method of viewing the sink hole. And although some of you may be aware of this, I was in the dark about what I would be able to see. So I thought I would share my observations. Yes there is a 48" observation manhole. However, there is only a small roughly 9" x 12" window that you can peer down into the 30' deep section of pipe which contains a ladder that presumably allows inspectors to go down and check on things. Nothing exciting to see at all. They added a nice exhibit that tells the complete story of the occurrence. It's presents a great learning experience into the geology and sequence of events that took place. A couple of new interactive hands on stations were built as part of the new display. One illustrated where the cars locations were in the hole relative to each other. And the other was a game that allowed you to manipulate removal of debris and cars. It was broke though. Definitely worth seeing if you've yet to visit. On the way back we stopped again and I also had to take time out to visit the assembly plant. There is a huge addition being added that is going to be the future paint shop. It appears to be as big as the entire existing assembly plant itself. Since I've toured the plant twice previously, I spent more time checking out the infrastructure of the plant instead of the cars themselves. It really is interesting to see the automation employed. Unmanned parts carriers go by carrying parts to who knows where. A couple of things I learned was how to notice the difference between models. White tail lights, longer rear hood spoiler, flared wheel wheels for the Z06 as example. Another thing I wasn't aware of is that they had moved the entire engine performance build center out of Wixom Michigan to this plant. I could go on, but if you've never been down to tour the plant, I highly recommend it.

Your CCCC President

Dave Pursel

John Bechtel and Colin Nethaway Memorial Scholarships

For many years now, our club has funded two $500.00 scholarships for automotive technology students at the Capital Area Career Center. On March 23, 2016, Simon Reiffer and Sandy Bechtel attended the center's annual scholarship dinner. This year, both the John Bechtel Memorial and the Colin Nethaway Memorial Scholarships were awarded to Arianna Argersinger.

Arianna is from Dansville High School, and is a second-year automotive technology student at the center. According to her instructor, she has shown leadership abilities by being a team foreman, a student forum representative, and an officer on the Motorsports Team. In her scholarship application, she wrote: "Not only has this program helped me find myself, but it has given me the opportunity to show who I am and what I can do. Having to work through every situation that crossed my path has prepared me for my future in the automotive industry". Arianna plans to continue her automotive technology education at Ferris State University in the fall of 2016.

Congratulations, Arianna! We are happy and honored to be a part of your education experience.

Out of Sight

Featuring a psychedelic logo, Out of Sight, was the theme for the NCCC Convention that was held in Grand Rapids, MI in July 1968. The event was held at the Howard Johnson Motel and hosted by the Corvette Club of Michigan. The first day began with 60 Corvettes polished and detailed for a concours d'elegance in a supermarket parking lot. Instead of the typical poolside party, a Casino Night was held that evening.

On Thursday 56 cars participated in a rally while others opted for a tour of the GM stamping plant. The Council Governors held a business meeting in the afternoon. Later in the afternoon the participants boarded buses and went to Elk's park on Lake Michigan for an ox roast, fun on the beach and entertainment by "The Wyld Syde" band. (A Google search revealed that Elk's park is in Muskegon.)

Grattan Raceway was the venue for a speedkhana on Friday. 134 drivers also competed in 14 classes of drag events. An awards luncheon was held on Saturday. At an evening reception and dinner, Joe Pike, Chevrolet Assistant Manager of Merchandising, thanked the group for their enthusiasm and introduced the featured speaker, Zora Arkus-Duntov. Zora spoke about the design philosophy of the Corvette and said, "We think Corvette is the right car. Talking to you people convinces me." Zora introduced his wife Elfie who was wearing a wide belt that was decorated with emblems of activities that Zora had participated in over the past twenty years.

The five day convention was a mixture of fun, business, food and friendship. The NCCC Convention tradition continues in July 2016 with the convention that is being held in Omaha, Nebraska and hosted by the Cornhusker Corvette Club. As the NCCC motto states: "We joined for the car. We stay for the people."

Message from NCCC Convention Directors

“Have I got news for you”

There is still room for you and your better half to register for the 2016 Corvette Convention in Omaha Ne. The tours are not quite full, neither are the hotels and the race track can hold more cars, so come on down July 17, 2016 and join us for a fun week.

To sweeten the pot, we will be drawing a name at the April 23rd Governors meeting in Saint Louis, from all the people who have registered by April 20, 2016. The winner will receive a free registration to the convention for two. You do not need to be present to win.

We have planned to “knock your socks off” at our convention, so go on line and register, so you’ll be able to enjoy our hospitality. Did I mention cold beer? We look forward to seeing you “ROAR INTO OMAHA”.

Your convention directors,
Gene Gau & Jerry Koraleski
